Self-study

The course involves processing lecture materials and independently studying topics and questions not covered in lectures. Additionally, students are recommended to utilize supplementary materials (official websites of government and judicial institutions) for independent study and analysis.

The course includes an individual assignment in the form of a report and presentation on a course topic. Students may choose from a list of suggested topics or agree on a subject with the lecturer. For this, the student performs a bibliographic search, creates a presentation plan or poses questions that need to be answered after mastering the sources on the topic.

The student will then reveal the content of the issues and present their work in a seminar. The presentation should be 16-25 slides, while the report should be 4-6 standard pages. The main content of the presentation is delivered freely during a seminar session, and the student receives a grade (20 points), which is added to the overall score.
